

Summary:

artificial intelligence is a branch of computer science that focuses on creating systems capable of performing tasks that typically require human intelligence .
search algorithms help in finding solutions from a set of possible outcomes .
expert systems are another important component of artificial intelligence .